1823.
INTRODUCTION.

THE Compiler of "English Grammar, adapted to the different classes of learners," having been frequently solicited to publish an Abridgment of that work, for the use of children commencing their grammatical studies, he hopes that the epitome which he now offers to the public will be found useful and satisfactory.

His chief view in presenting the book in this form, is, to preserve the larger work from being torn and defaced by the younger scholars, in their first study of the general outline which it prescribes; and, consequently, to render their application to each part both new and inviting. If a small volume is better adapted to the taste of children than a large one; and more readily engages their attention, from the apparent shortness of the road they have to travel, the abridgment will thence derive additional recommendations. To give these arguments the greatest weight, the book is neatly bound and printed with a fair letter and on good paper.

A slight inspection of the manner in which the work is executed, will show that it is not intended to supply the place, or supercede the use of the original Grammar. If, however, the teachers of such children as can devote but a small part of their time to this study, should think proper to make use of it, they will not, it is imagined, find it more defective than abridgments commonly are. It exhibits a general scheme of the subjects of Grammar, and contains definitions and rules, which the Compiler has endeavored to render as exact, concise, and intelligible, as the nature of the subject would admit.

The tutors who may adopt this abridgment, merely as an introduction to the larger Grammar, will perceive in it a material advantage, which the other short works do not possess; namely, that the progress of their pupils will be accelerated, and the pleasure of study increased, when they find themselves advanced to a grammar, which exactly pursues the plan of the book they have studied; and which does not perplex them with new definitions and discordant views of the subject. The scholars also, who, in other seminaries, may be confined to this epitome, will be more readily invited afterwards to pursue the study of Grammar, when they perceive, from the intimate connexion of the books, the facility with which they may improve themselves in the art.

It may justly be doubted, whether there is any ground for objection to the following compilation, on account of the additional cost it will occasion. The preservation of the larger Grammar, by using the abridgment, may in most instances, make amends for the charge of the latter. But were this not the case, it is hoped the period has passed away, in which the important business of education was too often, regulated or influenced by a parsimonious economy.

The Compiler presumes that no objection can properly be made to the phraseology, from an idea that, in books of this kind the language should be brought down to the level of what is familiar to children. It is indeed indispensable, that our words and phrases should, without requiring much attention and explanation, be intelligible to young persons; but it will scarcely be controverted that it is better to lead them forward, and improve their language, by proper examples, than to exhibit such as will confirm them in a feeble and puerile mode of expression. Children have language, as well as other things, to learn, and cultivate; and if good models are set before them, instruction and diligence will soon make them understood, and habit will render them familiar and pleasing. Perhaps there is no method by which this advantage may, in general, be more readily and effectually produced, than by accustoming children to commit to memory sentences in which the words are properly chosen, and the construction and arrangement correct. This was one object which the compiler had in view, when he composed the Grammar of which this is an epitome; and he hopes that he has not altogether failed in his endeavors to attain it.

But on this point, or on any other part of the work, it belongs not to him to determine; the whole must be referred to the decision of the impartial and judicious reader. Holgate, near York, 1797.
THE Ninth edition of this work has had an accession of eighteen pages of new matter; comprising exercises in parsing, in orthography and punctuation. The exercises in parsing have not only been very considerably augmented; they have also been moulded into a new form and arrangement, which the author hopes will facilitate to young persons the acquisition of this fundamental part of grammatical knowledge.*

An abridgment must necessarily be concise, and it will, in some points, be obscure. Those teachers, therefore, who do not make use of the author’s larger grammar, in their schools, will find an advantage by consulting it themselves. Many of the rules and positions are, in that work supported, and illustrated by peculiar disquisitions; and the connexion of the whole system is clearly exhibited. The Sixteenth edition of the Grammar has, in these respects, received considerable improvements.

Holdgate, 1803.

*The Eleventh Edition has been improved, by inserting the irregular verbs; a list of nouns arranged according to their gender; and by many other articles correspondent to the latest improvements in the larger Grammar.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR is the art of speaking and writing the English language with propriety.

It is divided into four parts, viz. Orthography, Etymology, Syntax and Prosody.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

LETTERS.

An articulate sound, is the sound of the human voice, formed by the organs of speech.

Orthography teaches the nature and powers of letters, and the just method of spelling words.

A letter is the first principle, or least part, of a word.

The letters of the English language, called the English Alphabet, are twenty-six in number.
The following is a list of the Roman and Italic Characters.

Letters are divided into vowels and consonants.

A vowel is an articulate sound that can be perfectly uttered by itself: as a, e, o; which are formed without the help of any other sound.

A consonant is an articulate sound, which cannot be perfectly uttered without the help of a vowel: as b, d, f, l; which require vowels to express them fully.
The vowels are, a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y.

W and y are consonants when they begin a word or syllable; but in every other situation they are vowels.

Consonants are divided into mutes and semi-vowels.

The mutes cannot be sounded at all without the aid of the vowel. They are, b, p, t, d, k, and c and g hard.

The semi-vowels have an imperfect sound of themselves. They are, f, l, m, n, r, v, s, z, and x, c and g soft.*

Four of the semi-vowels, namely, l, m, n, r, are also distinguished by the name of liquids, from their readily uniting with other consonants, and flowing as it were into their sounds.

A diphthong is the union of two vowels, pronounced by a single impulse of the voice; as ea in beat, ou in sound.

A triphthong, the union of three vowels, pronounced in like manner; as eau in beau, ieu in view.

A proper diphthong is that in which both the vowels are sounded; as, oi in voice, ou in ounce.

An improper diphthong has but one of the vowels sounded; as ea in eagle, oa in boat.

SYLLABLES.

A syllable is a sound either simple or compounded, pronounced by a single impulse of the voice, and constituting a word, or part of a word; as, a, an, ant.

Spelling is the art of rightly dividing words into their syllables; or of expressing a word by its proper letters.*

*For the distinction between the nature and the name of a consonant, see the larger Grammar, 15th edition, p. 19.

*Dr. Johnson's Dictionary is the best standard of English orthography.
Words.

Words are articulate sounds, used by common consent, as signs of our ideas.

A word of one syllable is termed a monosyllable; a word of two syllables, a dissyllable; a word of three syllables, a trisyllable; a word of four or more syllables, a polysyllable.

All words are either primitive or derivative.

A primitive word is that which cannot be reduced to any simpler word in the language; as man, good, content.

A derivative word is that which may be reduced to another word in English of greater simplicity; as, manful, goodness, contentment, Yorkshire.

Etymology.

The second part of Grammar is Etymology; which treats of the different sorts of words, their various modifications, and their derivation.

There are in English nine sorts of words, or, as they are commonly called, parts of Speech; namely, the Article, the Substantive or Noun, the Adjective, the Pronoun, the Verb, the Adverb, the Preposition, the Conjunction and the Interjection.

1. An article is a word prefixed to substantives to point them out, and to show how far their signification extends; as, a garden, an eagle, the woman.

2. A Substantive or noun is the name of any thing that exists, or of which we have any notion; as, London, man, virtue.

A substantive may, in general be distinguished by its taking an article before it, or by its making sense of itself, as, a book, the sun, an apple, temperance, industry, charity.

3. An Adjective is a word added to a substantive, to express its quality; as, an industrious man, a virtuous woman.

An adjective may be known by its making sense with the addition of the word thing; as, a good thing, a bad thing; or of any particular substantive; as, a sweet apple, a pleasant prospect.

4. A Pronoun is a word used instead of a noun, to avoid the too frequent repetition of the same word; as, The man is happy; he is benevolent; he is useful.

5. A Verb is a word which signifies to be to do or to suffer; as, "I am, I rule, I am ruled."

A Verb may generally be distinguished by its making sense with any of the personal pronouns, or the word to before it; as, I walk, he plays, they write; or, to walk, to play, to write.

6. An Adverb is a part of speech joined to a verb, an adjective, and sometimes to another adverb, to express some quality or circumstance respecting it; as, he reads well; a truly good man; he writes very correctly.

An Adverb may be generally known, by its answering the question, How? How much? When? or, Where? as in the phrase, "He reads correctly," the answer to the question, How does he read is, correctly.

7. Prepositions serve to connect words with one another, and to show the relation between them; as, "He went from London to York;" she is above disguise;" "They are supported by industry."

A preposition may be known by its admitting after it a personal pronoun in the objective case; as with, for, to, &c. will allow the objective case after them; with him, for her, to them, &c.

8. A Conjunction is a part of speech that is chiefly used to connect sentences; so as, out of two or more sentences to make but one; it sometimes connects only words; as, "Thou and he are happy, because you are good." "Two and three are five."

9. Interjections are words thrown in between the parts of a sentence, to express the passions or emotions of the speaker; as "O virtue! how amiable thou art!"
ARTICLE.

An Article is a word prefixed to substantives, to point them out and show how far their signification extends; as a garden, an eagle, the woman.

In English there are but two articles, a and the; a becomes an before a vowel, and before a silent h; as an acorn, an hour. But if the h be sounded, the a only is to be used; as, a hand, a heart, a highway.

A or an is styled the indefinite article: it is used in a vague sense, to point out one single thing of the kind, in other respects indeterminate; as "Give me a book;" "Bring me an apple."

The is called the indefinite article, because it ascertains what particular things are meant; as "Give me the book;" "Bring me the apples;" meaning some book, or apples referred to.

A substantive without an article to limit it, is generally taken in its widest sense; as, "A candid temper is proper for man;" that is, for all mankind.

SUBSTANTIVE. *

A substantive or noun is the name of any thing that exists, or of which we have any notion; as, *London, Man, Virtue."

Substantives are either proper or common.

Proper names or substantives, are the names appropriated to individuals; as, *George, London, Thames."

As soon as the learner has committed to memory the definitions of the article and substantive, he should be employed in parsing these parts of speech, as they are arranged in the correspondent Exercises, in the Appendix. The learner should proceed in this manner, through all the definitions and rules, regularly turning to, and parsing the exercises of one definition or rule, before he proceeds to another. In the same order, he should be taught to correct the erroneous examples in the Exercises. For further directions respecting the mode of using the Exercises see "English Exercises," Tenth, or any subsequent edition, page 9—10.
Common names or substantives, stand for kinds containing many sorts, or for sorts containing many individuals under them; as, animal, man, tree, &c.

To substantives belong gender, number, and case; and they are all of the third person, when spoken of, and of the second, when spoken to; as, "Blessings attend us on every side: Be grateful, children of men!" that is, ye children of men.

Gender.

Gender is the distinction of nouns, with regard to the sex. There are three genders, the Masculine, the Feminine, and the Neuter.

The masculine gender denotes animals of the male kind; as, a man, a horse, a bull.

The feminine gender signifies animals of the female kind; as, a woman, a duck, a hen.

The neuter gender denotes objects which are neither males nor females; as, a field, a house, a garden.

Some substantives naturally neuter are, by a figure of speech, converted into the masculine or feminine gender; as, when we say of the sun, he is setting, and of a ship, she sails well, &c.

The English language has three methods of distinguishing the sex, viz.

1. By different words: as,

   Male.
   Bachelor
   Boar
   Boy
   Brother
   Buck
   Bull
   Bullock, or Steer
   Cock
   Dog
   Drake
   Earl
   Father
   Friar

   Female.
   maid
   sow girl
   sister
   doe
   cow
   heifer
   hen
   bitch
   duck
   countess mother

ETYMOLOGY.

NUMBER.

Number is the consideration of an object, as one or more.

Substantives are of two numbers, the singular and plural.

The singular number expresses but one object; as, a chair, a table.

The plural number signifies more objects than one; as, chairs, tables.

Some nouns, from the nature of the things which they express, are used only in the singular, others only in the plural form; as, wheat, pitch, gold, cloth, pride, &c., and bellows, scissors, lungs, riches, &c.

Some words are the same in both numbers, as; deer, sheep, swine, &c.

The plural number of nouns is generally formed by adding s to the singular; as, dove, doves; face, faces; thought, thoughts. But when the substantive singular ends in x, ch, sh, or ss, we add es in the plural; as, box, boxes; church, churches; lash, lashes; kiss, kisses.

Nouns ending in f or fe, are generally rendered plural by the change of those terminations into ves; as, loaf, loaves; wife, wives. Those which end in ff, have the regular plural; as ruff, ruffs.

Such as have y in the singular, with no other vowel in the same syllable, change it into ies in the plural; as beauty, beauties; fly, flies; but the y is not changed, when there is another vowel in the syllable; as key, keys; delay, delays.

CASE.

In English, substantives have three cases, the Nominative, the Possessive, and the Objective.*

The nominative case simply expresses the name of a thing, or the subject of the verb: as, "The boy plays;" "The girls learn."

The possessive case expresses the relation of property or possession; and has an apostrophe with

*On the propriety of this objective case, see the large Grammar, pp. 54, 55.
the letter s coming after it; as "The scholar's duty," "My father's house."

When the plural ends in s, the other s is omitted, but the apostrophe is retained; as, "On eagles' wings; "The drapers' company."

Sometimes also, when the singular terminates in s, the apostrophe is not added; as, "For goodness' sake;" For righteousness' sake."

The objective case expresses the object of an action, or of a relation; and generally follows a verb active, or a preposition; as, "John assists Charles;" "They live in London."

English substantives are declined in the following manner:

<td>the men's</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ADJECTIVE.

An Adjective is a word added to a substantive, to express its quality; as, "An industrious man;" "A virtuous woman;" "A benevolent mind."

In English the adjective is not varied on account of gender, number, or case. Thus we say, "A careless boy; careless girls."

The only variation which it admits, is that of the degrees of comparison.

There are commonly reckoned three degrees of comparison; the positive, comparative and superlative.

The positive state expresses the quality of an object, without any increase or diminution; as good, wise, great.

The comparative degree increases or lessens the positive in signification; as wiser, greater, less wise.
The superlative degree increases or lessens the positive to the highest or lowest degree; as wisest, greatest, least wise.

The simple word, or positive, becomes the comparative, by adding r or er; and the superlative, by adding st or est, to the end of it; as wise, wiser, wisest; great, greater, greatest. And the adverbs more and most, placed before the adjective, have the same effect; as wise, more wise, most wise.

Monosyllables, for the most part, are compared by er or est; and dissyllables by more and most; as, mild, milder, mildest; frugal, more frugal, most frugal.

Some words of very common use are irregularly formed; as good, better, best; bad, worse, worst; little, less, least; much or many, more, most; and a few others.

PRONOUNS.

A Pronoun is a word used instead of a noun, to avoid the too frequent repetition of the same word; as, "The man is happy; he is benevolent; he is useful."

There are three kinds of pronouns, viz. the Personal, the Relative, and the Adjective Pronouns.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

There are five Personal Pronouns; viz. I, thou, he, she, it; with their plurals, we, ye or you, they.

Personal pronouns admit of person, number, gender, and case.

The persons of pronouns are three in each of the numbers, viz.

I, is the first person
Thou is the second person
He she or it, is the third person

We, is the first person
Ye, or you, is the second person
They, is the third person

The numbers of pronouns, like those of substantives, are two, the singular and the plural; as, I, thou, he; we, ye, they.
Gender has respect only to the third person singular of the pronouns, he, she, it. He is masculine; she is feminine; it is neuter.

Pronouns have three cases; the nominative, the possessive, and the objective.

The objective case of a pronoun has, in general, a form different from that of the nominative or the possessive case.

The personal pronouns are thus declined.

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

Relative Pronouns are such as relate, in general, to some word or phrase going before, which is thence called the antecedent; they are who, which, and that; as, "The man is happy who lives virtuously."

What is a kind of compound relative, including both the antecedent and the relative, and is equivalent to that which; as, "This is *what I wanted;" that is to say, "*the thing which I wanted.""

Who is applied to persons, which to animals and inanimate things; as, "He is a *friend, who is faithful in adversity;” “The bird, which sung so sweetly is flown;” “This is the tree which produces no fruit.”

That, as a relative, is often used to prevent the too frequent repetition of who and which. It is applied to persons and things; as, “He that acts wisely deserves praise;” “Modesty is a quality that highly adorns a woman.”

Who is of both numbers, and is thus declined.

Who, which, what, are called Interrogatives, when they are used in asking questions; as, “Who is he?” “Which is the book?” “What are you doing?”

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

Adjective Pronouns are of a mixed nature, participating the properties both of pronouns and adjectives.

The adjective pronouns may be subdivided into four sorts, namely, the possessive, the distributive, the demonstrative, and the indefinite.

1. The possessive are those which relate to possession or property.

There are seven of them, viz. my, thy, his, her, our, your, their.

Mine and thine, instead of my and thy, were formerly used before a substantive or adjective beginning with a vowel, or a silent /h/; as, “Blot out all mine iniquities.”

2. The distributive are those which denote the persons or things that make up a number, as taken separately and singly. They are, each, every, either; as, “Each of his brothers is in a favorable situation.” “Every man must account for himself.” “I have not seen either of them.”

3. The demonstrative are those which precisely point out the subjects to which they relate: this

VERBS.

A Verb is a word which signifies to be, to do, or to suffer; as, "I am, I rule, I am ruled."

Verbs are of three kinds; Active, Passive, and Neuter. They are also divided into Regular, Irregular and Defective.

A Verb Active expresses an action, and necessarily implies an agent, and an object acted upon; as, to love; "I love Penelope."

A Verb Passive expresses a passion or a suffering, or the receiving of an action; and necessarily implies an object acted upon, and an agent by which it is acted upon; as to be loved; "Penelope is loved by me."

A Verb Neuter expresses neither action nor passion; but being, or a state of being; as, "I am, I sleep, I sit."

Auxiliary or Helping Verbs, are those by the help of which the English verbs are principally conjugated; they are do, be, have, shall, will, may, can, with their variations; and let and must, which have no variation.

To Verbs belong Number, Person, Mood and Tense.
NUMBER AND PERSON.

Verbs have two numbers, the Singular and the Plural; as, "I love, we love."

In each number there are three persons; as, SINGULAR.

First Person I love.  We love.
Second Person Thou lovest.  Ye love.
Third Person He loves.  They love.

Mood or Mode is a particular form of the verb, showing the manner in which the being, action, or passion, is represented.

There are five moods of verbs, the Indicative, the Imperative, the Potential, the Subjunctive, and the Infinitive.

The Indicative Mood simply indicates or declares a thing; as, "He loves; he is loved; or it asks a question; as, "Does he love? Is he loved?"

The Imperative Mood is used for commanding, exhorting, intreating, or permitting; as, "Depart thou; mind ye; let us stay; go in peace."

The Potential Mood implies possibility or liberty, power, will, or obligation; as, "It may rain; he may go or stay; I can ride; he would walk; they should learn."

The Subjunctive Mood represents a thing under a condition, motive, wish, supposition, &c. and is preceded by a conjunction, expressed or understood, and attended by another verb; as, "I will respect him, though he chide me;" "Were he good, he would be happy;" that is, "if he were good."

The Infinitive Mood expresses a thing in a general and unlimited manner, without any distinction of number or person; as, "to act, to speak, to be, feared."

The Participle is a certain form of the verb, and derives its name from its participating, not only the properties of a verb, but also those of an adjective; as I am desirous of knowing him; Admired and applauded, he became vain;" "Having finished his work, he submitted it;" &c.
There are three Participles, the Present or Active, the Perfect or Passive, and the compound Perfect; as, "loving, lover, having loved."

THE TENSES.

Tense being the distinction of time, might seem to admit only of the present, past and future; but to mark it more accurately, it is made to consist of six variations, viz. the Present, the Imperfect, the Perfect, the Pluperfect, the First and Second Future Tenses.

The Present Tense represents an action or event, as passing at the time in which it is mentioned; as, "I rule; I am ruled; I think; I fear."

The Imperfect Tense represents the action or event, either as past and finished, or as remaining unfinished at a certain time past; as, "I loved her for her modesty and virtue;" "They were traveling post when he met them."

The Perfect Tense not only refers to what is past, but also conveys an allusion to the present time; as, "I have finished my letter;" "I have seen the person that was recommended to me."

The Pluperfect Tense represents a thing, not only as past, but also as prior to some other point of time specified in the sentence; as, "I had finished my letter before he arrived."

The first Future Tense represents the action as yet to come, either with or without respect to the precise time when; as, "The sun will rise tomorrow;" "I shall see them again."

The second Future intimates that the action will be fully accomplished, at or before the time of another future action or event; as I shall have dined at one o'clock;" "The two houses will have finished their business, when the king comes to prorogue them."

The conjugation of a verb is the regular combination and arrangement of its several numbers, persons, moods, and tenses.

The conjugation of an active verb is styled the ACTIVE VOICE; and that of a passive verb the PASSIVE VOICE.

The auxiliary and active verb To have, is conjugated in the following manner:

TO HAVE.

*The verbs, though conjugated at large through all their tenses, that the learners may, by a full and regular display of them, more completely understand their nature and use, need not be wholly committed to memory, by young persons who are beginning the study of Grammar. If the simple tenses, namely the present and the imperfect together with the first future tense, should in the first instance, be committed to memory, and the rest carefully perused and explained, the business will not be tedious to the scholars, and their progress will be rendered more obvious and pleasing. The general view of the subject thus acquired and impressed, may be afterwards extended with ease and advantage.

The verbs which are conjugated regularly, as well as irregularly, are marked with an r. Those preterites and participles, which are first mentioned in the list, seem to be the most eligible,

DEFECTIVE VERBS.
Defective Verbs are those which are used only in some of their moods and tenses: as, am, was; been; can, could; may, might; shall, should; will, would, &c.

ADVERB.
An Adverb is a part of speech joined to a verb, an adjective, and sometimes to another adverb, to express some quality or circumstance respecting it, as, "He reads well;" "A truly good man;" "He writes very correctly."

Some adverbs are compared thus; "Soon, sooner, soonest; often, oftener, oftenest." Those ending in ly, are compared by more and most, as, "Wisely, more wisely; most wisely."

The following are a few of the Adverbs:

Once lastly presently quickly not now before often perhaps how here lately much indeed more

PREPOSITION.

Prepositions serve to connect words with one another, and to show the relation between them. They are for the most part set before nouns and pronouns; as, "He went from London to York;" "She is above disguise;" "They are supported by industry."

The following is a list of the principal prepositions.

Of into above at off to within below near on or upon for without between up among by over beneath down after with under from before about in through beyond behind against

CONJUNCTION.

Conjunctions are principally divided into two sorts, the Copulative and Disjunctive.

The Conjunction Copulative serves to connect or continue a sentence, by expressing an addition, a supposition, a cause, &c.; as "He and his brother reside in London;" "I will go if he will accompany me;" "You are happy because you are good."

The Conjunction Disjunctive serves, not only to connect and continue the sentence, but also to express opposition of meaning in different degrees; as; "Though he was frequently reproved, yet he did not reform;" "They came with her, but went away without her."
SYNTAX.

The following is a list of the principal conjunctions:

The Copulative.—And, that, both, for, therefore, if, then, since, because, wherefore.

The Disjunctive.—But, than, though, either, or, as, unless, neither, nor, lest, yet, notwithstanding.

INTERJECTION.

Interjections are words thrown in between the parts of a sentence, to express the passion or emotions of the speaker; as, "O! I have alienated my friend; Alas! I fear for life;" "O virtue, how amiable thou art!"

The following are some of the Interjections:

O! pish! heigh! lo! behold! ah! tush! fie! hush! hail!

OF DERIVATION.

Words are derived from one another in various ways, viz.:

1. Substantives are derived from verbs: as, from "to love," comes "lover."
2. Verbs are derived from substantives, adjectives, and sometimes from adverbs: as, from "salt," comes "to salt," from "warm," comes "to warm," from "forward," comes "to forward."
3. Adjectives are derived from substantives: as, from "health," comes "healthy."
4. Substantives are derived from adjectives: as, from "white," comes "whiteness."
5. Adverbs are derived from adjectives; as, from "base," comes "basely."

SYNTAX.

The third part of Grammar is Syntax, which treats of the agreement and construction of words in a sentence.

A sentence is an assemblage of words, forming a complete sense.

Sentences are of two kinds, Simple and Compound.

A simple sentence has in it but one subject, and one finite verb; as, "Life is short."
A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences, joined together by one or more connective words; as, "Life is short, and art is long."

A phrase is two or more words rightly put together, making sometimes part of a sentence, and sometimes a whole sentence.

The principal parts of a simple sentence are, the subject, the attribute, and the object.

The subject is the thing chiefly spoken of; the attribute is the thing or action affirmed, or denied of it; and the object is the thing affected by such action.

The nominative denotes the subject, and usually goes before the verb, or attribute; and the word or phrase denoting the object, follows the verb: as, "A wise man governs his passions." Here a wise man is the subject; governs the attribute, or thing affirmed; and his passions, the object.

Syntax principally consists of two parts, Concord and Government.

Concord is the agreement which one word has with another, in gender, number, case or person.

Government is that power which one part of speech has over another, in directing its mood, tense or case.

RULE I.

A verb must agree with its nominative case, in number and person; as, “I learn;” “Thou art improved;” “The birds sing.”

RULE II.

Two or more nouns, &c. in the singular number, joined together by one or more copulative conjunctions, have verbs, nouns, and pronouns agreeing with them in the plural number; as, “Socrates and Plato were wise; they were the most eminent philosophers of Greece;” “The sun that rolls over our heads, the food that we receive, the rest that we enjoy, daily admonish us of a superior and superintending power.

RULE III.

The conjunction disjunctive has an effect con-try to that of the conjunction copulative; for as the verb, noun, or pronoun is referred to the preceding terms taken separately, it must be in the singular number; as, "Ignorance or negligence has caused this mistake;" "John, or James, or Joseph intends to accompany me." "There is in many minds, neither knowledge nor understanding."

RULE IV.

A noun of multitude, or signifying many, may have a verb or pronoun agreeing with it, either of the singular or plural number, yet not without regard to the import of the word, as conveying unity or plurality of idea; as, "The meeting was large;" "The Parliament is dissolved;" "The nation is powerful;" "My people do not consider; they have not known me;" "The multitude eagerly pursue pleasure, as their chief good;" "The council were divided in their sentiments."

RULE V.

Pronouns must always agree with their antecedents, and the nouns for which they stand, in gender and number; as, "This is the friend whom I love;" "That is the vice which I hate." "The King and the Queen had put on their robes;" "The moon appears and she shines, but the light is not her own."

The relative is of the same person as the antecedent, and the verb agrees with it accordingly; as, "Thou who loveth wisdom;" "I who speak from experience."

RULE VI.

The relative is the nominative case to the verb, when no nominative comes between it and the verb; as, "The master who taught us;" "The trees which are planted."

When a nominative comes between the relative and the verb, the relative is governed by some word in its own member of the sentence; as, "He who preserveth me, to whom I owe my being, whose I am, and whom I serve, is eternal."
RULE VII.

When the relative is preceded by two nominatives of different persons, the relative and verb may agree in person with either, according to the sense; as, "I am the man who command you," or, "I am the man who commands you."

RULE VIII.

Every adjective, and every adjective pronoun, belongs to a substantive, expressed or understood: as, "He is a good, as well as a wise man;" "Few are happy," that is, "persons;" "This is a pleasant walk;" that is, "This walk is," &c.

Adjective pronouns must agree in number with their substantive; as, "This book, these books, that sort, those sorts; another road, other roads."

RULE IX.

The article a or an agrees with nouns in the singular number only, individually or collectively: as, "A Christian, an Infidel, a score, a thousand;"

The definite article the may agree with nouns in the singular or plural number; as, "the garden, the houses, the stars;"

The articles are often properly omitted; when used, they should be justly applied, according to the distinct nature; as, "Gold is corrupting; the sea is green; a lion is bold."

RULE X.

One substantive governs another signifying a different thing, in the possessive or genitive case; as, "My father's house;" "Man's happiness;" "Virtue's reward."

RULE XI.

Active verbs govern the objective case; as, "Truth ennobles her;" "She comforts me;" "They support us;" "Virtue rewards her followers."

RULE XII.

One verb governs another that follows it, or depends upon it, in the infinitive mood; as, "Cease to do evil; learn to do well;" "We should be prepared to render an account of our actions."
The preposition to, though generally used before the latter verb, is sometimes properly omitted; as, "I heard him say it;" instead of "to say it."

RULE XII.

In the use of words and phrases, which, in point of time, relate to each other, a due regard to that relation should be observed. Instead of saying, "The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken away;" we should say; "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away." Instead of "I remember the family more than twenty years;" it should be, "I have remembered the family more than twenty years."

RULE XIV.

Participles have the same government as the verbs from which they are derived; as, "I am weary with hearing him;" "She is instructing us;" "The tutor is admonishing Charles."

RULE XV.

Adverbs, though they have no government of case, tense, &c. require an appropriate situation in the sentence, viz. for the most part before adjectives, after verbs active or neuter, and frequently between the auxiliary and the verb; as, "He made a very sensible discourse; he spoke unaffectedly and forcibly; and was attentively heard by the whole assembly."

RULE XVI.

Two negatives in English, destroy one another, or are equivalent to an affirmative; as, "Nor did they not perceive him;" that is, "they did perceive him." "His language, though inelegant, is not ungrammatical;" that is, "it is grammatical."

RULE XVII.

Prepositions govern the objective case; as, "I have heard a good character of her;" "From him that is needy turn not away;" "A word to the wise is sufficient for them;" "We may be good and happy, without riches."

RULE XVIII.

Conjunctions connect the same moods and tenses of verbs, and cases of nouns and pronouns; as,
"Candor is to be approved and practised;" "If thou sincerely desire and earnestly pursue virtue, she will assuredly be found by thee, and prove a rich reward;" "The master taught her and me to write;" "He and she were school-fellows."

RULE XIX.

Some conjunctions require the indicative, some the subjunctive mood after them. It is a general rule, that, when something contingent or doubtful is implied, the subjunctive ought to be used; as, "If I were to write, he would not regard it;" "he will not be pardoned, unless he repent."

Conjunctions that are of a positive and absolute nature, require the indicative mood. "As virtue advances so vice recedes;" "He is healthy because he is temperate."

RULE XX.

When the qualities of different things are compared, the latter noun or pronoun is not governed by the conjunction than or as, but agrees with the verb, or is governed by the verb or the preposition, expressed or understood; as, "Thou art wiser than I;" that is, "than I am." "They loved him more than me;" i. e. "more than they loved me;" "The sentiment is well expressed by Plato, but much better by Solomon than him;" that is, "than by him."

RULE XXI.

To avoid disagreeable repetitions, and to express our ideas in a few words, an elipses, or omission of some words, is frequently admitted. Instead of saying, "He was a learned man, he was a wise man, and he was a good man;" we use the elipses, and say, "he was a learned, wise and good man."

When the omission of words would obscure the sentence, weaken its force, or be attended with an impropriety, they must be expressed. In the sentence, "We are apt to love who love us," the word them should be supplied. "A beautiful field and trees," is not proper language. It should be,
"Beautiful fields and trees," or, "A beautiful field, and fine trees."

RULE XXII.

All the parts of a sentence should correspond to each other; a regular and dependant construction throughout should be carefully preserved. The following sentence is therefore inaccurate: "He was more beloved, but not so much admired, as Cinthio." More requires than after it, which is nowhere found in the sentence. It should be, "He was more beloved than Cinthio, but not so much admired."

PROSODY.

Prosody consists of two parts; the former teaches the true pronunciation of words, comprising Accent, Quantity, Emphasis, Pause, and Tone, and the latter the laws of versification.

ACCENT.

Accent is the laying of peculiar stress of the voice, on a certain letter or syllable in a word, that it may be better heard than the rest, or distinguished from them; as in the word presumed, the stress of the voice must be on the letter u, and second syllable, sume, which take the accent.

QUANTITY.

The quantity of a syllable is that which is occupied in pronouncing it. It is considered as long or short.

A vowel or syllable is long, when the accent is on the vowel; which occasions it to be slower joined in pronunciation, to the following letter; as, "Fall, bâle, mood, hose, feature."

A syllable is short, when the accent is on the consonant; which occasions the vowel to be quickly joined to the succeeding letter; as, "an't, bonnet, hunger."

A long syllable requires double the time of a short one in pronouncing it; thus, "Mate" and "note" should be pronounced as slowly again as mate and not."
EMPHASIS.

By emphasis is meant a stronger and fuller sound of voice, by which we distinguish some word or words on which we design to lay particular stress, and to show how it affects the rest of the sentence. Sometimes the emphatic words must be distinguished by a particular tone of voice, as well as by a greater stress.

PAUSES.

Pauses or rests, in speaking or reading, are a total cessation of the voice, during a perceptible, and, in many cases, a measurable space of time.

TONES.

Tones are different both from emphasis and pauses; consisting in the modulation of the voice, the notes or variations of sound which we employ, in the expression of our sentiments.

VERSIFICATION.

Versification is the arrangement of a certain number and variety of syllables, according to certain laws.

Rhyme is the correspondence of the last sound of one verse, to the last sound or syllable of another.

PUNCTUATION

Is the art of dividing a written composition into sentences, or parts of sentences, by points or stops, for the purpose of marking the different pauses, which the sense and an accurate pronunciation require.

The Comma represents the shortest pause; the Semicolon, a pause double that of the comma; the Colon double that of the semicolon; and the Period double that of the colon.

The points are marked in the following manner:—

The Comma, The Colon:
The Semicolon; The Period.

COMMA.

The comma usually separates those parts of a sentence, which though very closely connected in sense, require a pause between them: as, I remember, with gratitude, his love and services."
"Charles is beloved, esteemed, and respected."

SEMICOLON.
The Semicolon is used for dividing a compound sentence into two or more parts, not so closely connected as those which are separated by a comma, nor yet so little dependant on each other, as those which are distinguished by a colon: as, "Straws swim on the surface; but pearls lie at the bottom."

COLON.
The Colon is used to divide a sentence into two or more parts, less connected than those which are separated by a semicolon; but not so independent as separate, distinct sentences: as, "Do not flatter yourselves with the hope of perfect happiness: there is no such thing in the world."

PERIOD.
When a sentence is complete and independent, and not connected in construction with the following sentence, it is marked with a period: as, "Fear God. Honour the King. Have charity towards all men."

Besides the points which mark the pauses in discourse, there are others that denote a different modulation of voice, in correspondence to the sense. These are,

The Interrogative point, ?
The Exclamation point, !
The Parenthesis, ( )

as, "Are you sincere?"
"How excellent is a grateful heart!"
"Know then this truth (enough for man to know,)
"Virtue alone is happiness below."

The following characters are also frequently used in composition.

An Apostrophe, marked thus ' : as, "tho', judg'd."

A Caret, marked thus, ^ : as, "I diligenc."

A
A Hyphen, which is thus marked — as, "Lap-dog, to-morrow."

The Acute Accent, marked thus ’ as, "Fan’cy."
The Grave Accent, thus' as, "Fa’vour."

The proper mark to distinguish a long syllable is this as, "Rosy:" and a short one this, as
"Folly." The last is called a Breve.

A Diacresis, thus marked ″, shows that two vowels form separate syllables; as, "Créa'tor."

A Section is thus marked $;

A Paragraph, thus ¶

A Quotation has two inverted commas at the beginning, and two direct ones at the end of a phrase or passage: as,

"The proper study of mankind is man."

Crotchets or Brackets serve to inclose a particular word or sentence. They are marked thus [ ]-

An Index, or Hand ( ), points out a remarkable passage.

A Brace { } unites three poetical lines;
or connects a number of words, in prose, with one common term.

An Asterisk, or little star * directs the reader to some note in the margin.

An Ellipsis is thus marked ——: as, "K——g;"
for King.

An Obelisk, which is marked thus †, and Parallels thus ||, together with the letters of the alphabet, and figures, are used as references to the margin:

CAPITALS.
The following words should begin with capitals.

1st. The first word of every book, chapter letter, paragraph, &c.

2d. The first word after a period, and frequently after the notes of interrogation and exclamation.

3d. The names of the Deity: as, God, Jehoovah, the Supreme Being, &c.

4th. Proper names of persons, places, ships, &c.
APPENDIX.

5th. Adjectives derived from the proper names of places; as, Grecian, Roman, English, &c.

6th. The first word of an example, and of a quotation in a direct form; as, "Always remember this ancient maxim; "Know thyself."

7th. The first word of every line of poetry.

8th. The pronoun I, and the interjection O.

9th. Words of particular importance; as, the Reformation, the Restoration, the Revolution.

O, peace! how desirable! Hope often amuses, but seldom satisfies us. Though he is lively, yet he is not volatile. Hail, simplicity! source of genuine joy. Behold! how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Welcome again! my long lost friend.

SECT. VII.

A few instances of the same word's constituting several of the parts of speech. Calm was the day, and the scene delightful. We may expect a calm after a storm. To prevent passion, is easier than to calm it. Better is a little with content, than a great deal with anxiety. The gay and dissolute think little of the miseries, which are stealing softly after them. A little attention will rectify some errors. Though he is out of danger, he is still afraid. He laboured to still the tumult. Still waters are commonly deepest. [Some] Damp air is unwholesome. Guilt often casts a damp over our sprightliest hours. Few days pass without some clouds. Much money is corrupting. Think much, and speak little. He has seen much of the world, and been much caressed. His years are more than hers; but he has not more knowledge
The more we are blessed, the more grateful we should be
The desire of getting more is rarely satisfied
He has equal knowledge, but inferior judgment
She is his inferior in sense; but his equal in prudence
We must make a like space between the line
Both of them deserve praise
Every being loves its like
Behave yourselves like men
We are too apt to like pernicious company
He may go or stay as he likes
They strive to learn
He goes to and fro
To his wisdom we owe our privilege
The proportion is ten to one
He served them with his utmost ability
When we do our utmost, no more is required
I will submit, for submission brings peace
It is for our health to be temperate
O! for better times
I have a regard for him
He is esteemed both on his own account, and on that of his parents

Promiscuous Exercises in Etymological Parsing.

In your whole behavior, be humble and obliging.

Virtue is the universal charm.

True politeness has its seat in the heart.

We should endeavor to please, rather than to shine and dazzle.

Opportunities occur daily for strengthening in ourselves the habits of virtue.

Compassion prompts us to relieve the wants of others.

A good mind is unwilling to give pain to either man or beast.

Peevishness and passion often produce, from trifles, the most serious mischiefs.

Discontent often nourishes passions, equally malignant in the cottage and in the palace.

A great proportion of human evils is created by ourselves.

A passion for revenge, has always been considered as the mark of a little and mean mind.
If greatness flatters our vanity, it multiplies our dangers.

To our own failings we are commonly blind. The friendships of young persons are often found on capricious likings.

In your youthful amusement let no unfairness be found.

Engrave on your minds this sacred rule: "Do unto others, as you wish that they should do unto you."

Truth and candor possess a powerful charm; they bespeak universal favor.

After the first departure from sincerity, it is seldom in our power to stop: one artifice generally leads on to another.

Temper the vivacity of youth, with a proper mixture of serious thought.

The spirit of true religion is social, kind, and cheerful.

Let no compliance with the intemperate mirth of others, ever betray you into profane sallies.

In preparing for another world, we must not neglect the duties of this life.

The manner in which we employ our present time, may decide our future happiness or misery.

Happiness does not grow up of its own accord; it is the fruit of long cultivation, and the acquisition of labor and care.

A plain understanding is often joined with great worth.

The brightest parts are sometimes found without virtue or honour.

How feeble are the attractions of the fair form, when nothing within corresponds to them.

Piety and virtue are particularly graceful and becoming in youth.

Can we, untouched by gratitude, view that profusion of good, which the Divine hand pour round us?

There is nothing in human life more amiable and respectable, than the character of a truly humble and benevolent man.
What feelings are more uneasy and painful, than the workings of sour and angry passions?

No man can be active in disquieting others, who does not, at the same time, disquiet himself.

A life of pleasure and dissipation, is an enemy to health, fortune, and character.

To correct the spirit of discontent, let us consider how little we deserve, and how much we enjoy.

As far as happiness is to be found on earth, we must look for it, not in the world, or the things of the world; but within ourselves, in our temper, and in our heart.

Though bad men attempt to turn virtue into ridicule, they honour it at the bottom of their hearts.

Of what small moment to our real happiness, are many of those injuries which draw forth our resentment!

In the moments of eager contention, everything is magnified and distorted in its appearance.

Multitudes in the most obscure stations, are not less eager in their petty broils, nor less tormented by their passions, than if princely honors were the prize for which they contended.

The smooth stream, the serene atmosphere, the mild zephyr, are the proper emblems of a gentle temper, and a peaceful life. Among the sons of strife, all is loud and tempestuous.

SECT. III.

Exercises on the first, second, third and fourth Rules of Syntax.*

1. The contented mind spreads ease and cheerfulness around it.
   The school of experience teaches many useful lessons.
   In the path of life are many thorns, as well as flowers.
   Thou shouldst do justice to all men, even to enemies.

2. Vanity and presumption ruin many a promising youth.
   Food, clothing, and credit, are the rewards of industry.
   He and William live together in great harmony.

* In parsing these Exercises, the pupil should repeat the respective rule of Syntax, and show that it applies to the sentence which he is parsing.
3. No age, nor condition, is exempt from trouble.
   Wealth, or virtue, or any valuable acquisition, is not attainable by idle wishes.
4. The American nation is great and generous. The company is assembled. It is composed of persons possessing very different sentiments.
   A herd of cattle, peacefully grazing, affords a pleasing sight.

SECT. IV.

Exercises on the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth Rules of Syntax.

5. The man who is faithfully attached to religion, may be relied on with confidence.
   The vices which we should especially avoid, are those which most easily beset us.
6. They who are born in high stations, are not always happy.
   Our parents and teachers are the persons whom we ought, in a particular manner, to respect.
   If our friend is in trouble, we whom he knows and loves, may console him.
7. Thou art the man who has improved his privileges, and who will reap the reward.
   I am the person, who owns a fault committed, and who disdains to conceal it by falsehood.
8. That sort of pleasure weakens and debases the mind.
   Even in these times, there are many persons, who, from disinterested motives, are solicitous to promote the happiness of others.

SECT. V.

Exercises on the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth Rules of Syntax.

9. The restless, discontented person, is not a good friend, a good neighbor, or a good subject.
   The young, the healthy, and the prosperous, should not presume on their advantages.
10. The scholar's diligence will secure the tutor's approbation.

The good parent's greatest joy, is, to see his children wise and virtuous.

11. Wisdom and virtue ennoble us. Vice and folly debase us.

Whom can we so justly love, as them who have endeavored to make us wise and happy?

12. When a person has nothing to do, he is almost always tempted to do wrong.

We need not urge Charles to do good; he loves to do it.

We dare not leave our studies without permission.

SECT. II.

Exercises on the thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth Rules of Syntax.

13. The business is, at last, completed; but long ago, I intended to do it.

I expected to see the king, before he left Windsor.

The misfortune did happen; but we early hoped and endeavored to prevent it.

To have been censured by so judicious a friend, would have greatly discouraged me.

14. Having early disgraced himself, he became mean and dispirited.

Knowing him to be my superior, I cheerfully submitted.

15. We should always prepare for the worst, and hope for the best.

A young man, so learned and virtuous, promises to be a very useful member of society.

When our virtuous friends die, they are not lost forever; they are only gone before us to a happier world.

16. Neither threatenings, nor any promises, could make him violate the truth.

Charles is not insincere; and there are we may trust in...
17. From whom was that information received? To whom do that house, and those fine gardens belong?

SECT. VII.

18. He and I commenced our studies at the same time.
If we contend about trifles, and violently maintain our opinion, we shall gain but few friends.
19. Though James and myself are rivals, we do not cease to be friends.
If Charles acquires knowledge, good manners, and virtue, he will secure esteem
William is respected, because he is upright and obliging.
20. These persons are abundantly more oppressed than we are.
Though I am not so good a scholar as he is, I am, perhaps, not less attentive than he, to study.
21. Charles was a man of knowledge, learning, politeness, and religion.
In our travels we saw much to approve, and much to condemn.
22. The book is improved by many useful corrections, alterations and additions.
She is more talkative and lively than her brother, but not so well informed nor so uniformly cheerful.

SECT. VIII.
Promiscuous Exercises in Syntactical Parsing.
PROSE.

Dissimulation in youth, is the forerunner of perfidy in old age. Its first appearance is the fatal omen of growing depravity, and future shame.
If we possess not the power of self-government, we shall be the prey of every loose inclination that chances to arise. Pampered by continual indulgence, all our passions will become mutinous and headstrong. Desire, not reason, will be the ruling principle of our conduct.

Absurdly we spend our time in contending about the trifles of a day, while we ought to be preparing for a higher existence.

How little do they know of the true happiness of life, who are strangers to that intercourse of good offices and kind affections, which, by a pleasing charm, attaches men to one another, and circulates rational enjoyment from heart to heart.

If we view ourselves, with all our imperfections and failings, in a just light, we shall rather be surprised at our enjoying so many good things than discontented, because there are any which we want.

True cheerfulness makes a man happy in himself, and promotes the happiness of all around him. It is the clear and calm sunshine of a mind illuminated by piety and virtue.

Whatever views of interest, and prospects of return, mingle with the feelings of affection, sensibility acts an imperfect part, and entitles us to small share of commendation.

Let not your expectations from the years that are to come, rise too high; and your disappointments will be fewer, and more easily supported.

To live long, ought not to be our favorite wish, so much as to live well. By continuing too long on earth, we might only live to witness a greater number of melancholy scenes, and to expose ourselves to a wider compass of human woe.

How many pass away some of the most valuable years of their lives, lost in a whirlpool of what cannot be called pleasure so much as mere giddiness and folly.

Look round you with attentive eye, and weigh characters well, before you connect yourselves too closely with any who court your society.

The true honor of man consists not in the multitude of riches or the elevation of rank; for experi-once shows that these may be possessed by the worthless as well as by the deserving.

Beauty of form has often betrayed its possessor.
The flower is easily blasted. It is short-lived at the best; and tripping at any rate, in comparison with the higher, and more lasting beauties of the mind.

A contented temper opens a clear sky, and brightens every object around us. It is in the sullen and dark shade of discontent, that noxious passions, like venomous animals, breed and prey upon the heart.

Thousands whom indolence has sunk into contemptible obscurity, might have come forward to usefulness and honour, if idleness had not frustrated the effect of all their powers.

Sloth is like the slowly-flowing, putrid stream,
which stagnates in the marsh, breeds venomous animals, and poisonous plants; and infects with pestilential vapours the whole country round it.

Disappointments derange, and overcome vulgar minds. The patient and the wise, by a proper improvement, frequently make them contribute to their high advantage.

Whatever fortune may rob us of, it cannot take away what is most valuable, the peace of a good conscience, and the cheering prospect of a happy conclusion to all the trials of life, in a better world.

Be not overcome by the injuries you meet with,
so as to pursue revenge; by the disasters of life,
so as to sink into despair; by the evil examples of the world, so as to follow them into sin. Overcome injuries, by forgiveness; disasters by fortitude; evil examples, by firmness of principle.

Sobriety of mind is one of those virtues, which the present condition of human life strongly inculcates. The uncertainty of its enjoyments, checks presumption; the multiplicity of its dangers, demands perpetual caution. Moderation, vigilance, and self-government are duties incumbent on all;
but especially on such as are beginning the journey of life.
The charms and comforts of virtue are inexpressible; and can only be justly conceived by those who possess her. The consciousness of Divine approbation and support, and the steady hope of future happiness, communicate a peace and joy, to which all the delights of the world bear no resemblance.

If we knew how much the pleasure of this life deceive and betray their unhappy votaries; and reflected on the disappointments in pursuit, the dissatisfaction in enjoyment, or the uncertainty of possession, which everywhere attend them; we should cease to be enamoured with these brittle and transient joys: and should wisely fix our hearts on those virtuous attainments, which the world can neither give nor take away.

VERSE.

Order is Heaven's first law; and this confess'd
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise; but who infers from hence
That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

Needful austerities our wills restrain;
As thorns fence in the tender plant from harm.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace and competence,
But health consists with temperance alone;
And peace, Oh, virtue! peace is all thy own.

On earth, nought precious is obtain'd
But what is painful too;
By travel and to travel born,
Our Sabbaths are but few.

Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or failing, smiles in exile or in chains,
Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates, that man is great indeed.

Our hearts are fasten'd to this world,
By strong and endless ties;
But every sorrow cuts a string,
And urges us to rise.

Oft pining griefs in rich brocades are drest,
And diamonds glitter on an anxious breast.

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

This day be bread, and peace my lot:
All else beneath the sun
Thou know'st if best bestow'd or not,
And let thy will be done.

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen:
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

If nothing more than purpose in thy power,
Thy purpose firm, is equal to the deed:
Who does the best his circumstance allows,
Does well, acts nobly; angels could no more.

In faith and hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is charity.

To be resign'd when ills betide,
Patient when favors are denied,
And pleased with favors giv'n:
Most surely this is Wisdom's part,
This is that incense of the heart,
Whose fragrance smells to Heav'n.

All fame is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart.
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas:
And more true joy Marcellus exil'd feels,
Than Cæsar with a senate at his heels.
Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learnt to stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life,
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heart felt joy,
Is virtue's prize.

Pity the sorrows of a poor old man,
Whose trembling limbs have borne him to thy door,
Whose days are dwindled to the shortest span;
Oh! give relief, and Heaven will bless thy store.

Who lives to nature, rarely can be poor;
Who lives to fancy, never can be rich.

When young, life's journey I began,
The glitt'ring prospect charm'd my eyes;
I saw, along th' extended plain,
Joy after joy successive rise.

But soon I found 'twas all a dream,
And learnt'd the fond pursuit to shun,
Where few can reach their purpos'd aim,
And thousands daily are undone.

'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours;
And ask them what report they bore to Heaven.

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good.

Heaven's choice is safer than our own:
Of ages past inquire:
What the most formidable fate?
"To have our own desire."

If ceaseless, thus, the fowls of heaven he feeds,
If o'er the fields such lucid roves he spreads?
Will he not care for you, ye faithless, say?
Is he unwise? or are ye less than they?

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heav'ns; a shining frame;
Their great original proclaim:
Th' unwearied sun, from day to day,
Does his Creator's power display,
And publishes to ev'ry land,
The work of an Almighty hand.

Soon as the evening shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And, nightly, to the list'ning earth,
Repeats the story of her birth:
Whilst all the stars that round her burn,
And all the planets in their turn,
Confirm the tidings as they roll,
And spread the truth from pole to pole.

What though, in solemn silence,
Move round the dark terrestrial ball
What though nor real voice nor sound,
Amid their radiant orbs be found!
In Reason's ear they all rejoice,
And utter forth a glorious voice;
For ever singing as they shine,
"The hand that made us is Divine."

Fifty pounds of wheat contains forty pounds of flour.
What avails the best sentiments, if persons do not live suitably to them.
Thou should love thy neighbour, as sincerely as thou loves thyself.

RULE II.

Idleness and ignorance is the parent of many vices.
Patience and diligence, like faith, removes mountains.
What signifies the counsel and care of preceptors, when youth think they have no need of assistance?

RULE III.

Man's happiness or misery, are in a great measure, put into his own hands.
Man is not such a machine as a clock or a watch, which move merely as they are moved.
Speaking impatiently to servants, or any thing that betrays inattention or ill-humor, are certainly criminal.

RULE IV.

The British Parliament are composed of Kings, Lords, and Commons.
A great number do not always argue strength.
The council was not unanimous, and separated without coming to any determination.

RULE V.

They which seek wisdom will certainly find her.
I do not think that any person should incur censure, for being tender of their reputation.
Thou who has been a witness of the fact, can give an account of it.
RULE VI.
If he will not hear his best friend, whom shall he send to admonish him?
The persons who conscience and virtue support may smile at the caprices of fortune.
From the character of those who you associate with, your own will be estimated.

RULE VII.
Thou art the friend that hast often relieved me, and that has not deserted me now in the time of peculiar need.
I perceive that thou art a pupil who possesses bright parts, but who has cultivated them but little.

RULE VIII.
These kind of indulgencies soften and injure the mind.
Instead of improving yourselves, you have been playing this two hours.
Those sort of favors did real injury, under the appearance of kindness.

RULE IX.
The fire, the air, the earth, and the water, are four elements of the philosophers.
We are placed here under a trial of our virtue.
The profligate man is seldom or never found to be the good husband, the good father, or the beneficent neighbor.

RULE X.
Thy ancestors virtue is not thine.
Thy fathers offence will not condemn thee.
A mothers tenderness and a fathers care, are nature's gifts for mans advantage.
A mans manners frequently influence his fortune.

RULE XI.
Who have I reason to love so much as this friend of my youth?
The man who he raised from obscurity, is dead.
He and they we know, but who art thou?
RULE XII.
It is better live on a little, than outlive a great deal.
You ought not walk too hastily.
I have seen some young persons to conduct themselves very discreetly.

RULE XIII.
The next new year's day, I shall be at school three years.
From the little conversation I had with him, he appeared to have been a man of letters.
It would have given me great satisfaction, to relieve him from that distressed situation.

RULE XIV.
Esteeming themselves wise, they became fools.
Suspecting not only ye, but they also, I was studious to avoid all intercourse.
From having exposed himself too freely in different climates, he entirely lost his health.

RULE XV.
He was pleasing not often, because he was vain.
William nobly acted, though he was unsuccessful.
We may happily live, though our possessions be small.

RULE XVI.
Be honest, nor take no show nor resemblance of disguise.
There cannot be nothing more insignificant than vanity.
The measure is so exceptionable, that we cannot by no means permit it.

RULE XVII.
We are all accountable creatures, each for his self.
Does that boy know who he speaks to? Who does he offer such language to?
It was not he that they were so angry with.

RULE XVIII.
My brother and him are tolerable grammarians.
Did he not tell thee his fault, and entreated thee to forgive him!
Professing regard, and to act differently, marks a base mind.

RULE XIX.

Though he urges me yet more earnestly I shall not comply, unless he advances more forcible reasons.
She disapproved the measure, because it were very improper.
Though the fact be extraordinary, it certainly did happen.

RULE XX.
The business was much better executed by his brother than he.
They are much greater gainers than me by this unexpected event.
They know how to write as well as him; but he is a much better grammarian than them.

RULE XXI.
These counsels were the dictates of virtue, and the dictates of true honour.
We must guard against either too great severity or facility of manners.
Verily, there is a reward for the righteous!
There is a God that judgeth in the earth.

By these happy labors, they who sow and reap will rejoice together.

RULE XXII.
He is more bold and active, but not so wise and studious as his companion.
Sincerity is as valuable, and even more valuable, than knowledge.
Neither has he, nor any other persons, suspected so much dissimulation.
Several alterations and additions have been made to the work.
PART IV.

EXERCISES IN PUNCTUATION.

COMMA,

The tutor by instruction and discipline lays the foundation of the pupil’s future honor.
Self-conceit presumption and obstinacy blast the prospect of many a youth.
Deliberate slowly execute promptly.
To live soberly righteously and piously comprehends the whole of our duty.
The path of piety and virtue pursued with a firm and constant spirit will assuredly lead to happiness.
Continue my dear child to make virtue thy principal study.
Peace of mind being secured we may smile at misfortunes.
He who is a stranger to industry may possess but he cannot enjoy.
Beware of those rash and dangerous connexions which may afterwards load thee with dishonor.

SEMICOLON.

The path of truth is a plain and safe path that of falsehood is a perplexing maze.
Modesty is one of the chief ornaments of youth and has ever been esteemed a presage of rising merit.
Heaven is the region of gentleness and friendship hell of fierceness and animosity.

COLON.

Often is the smile of gaiety assumed whilst the heart aches within though folly may laugh guilt will sting.
There is no mortal truly wise and restless at the same time wisdom is the repose of minds.

PERIOD.

We ruin the happiness of life when we attempt to raise it too high a tolerable and comfortable state is all that we can propose to ourselves on earth peace and contentment not bliss nor transport are the full portion of man perfect joy is reserved for heaven.

INTERROGATION AND EXCLAMATION.

To lie down on the pillow after a day spent in temperance in beneficence and in piety how sweet it is.

We wait till to-morrow to be happy alas why not to day shall we be younger are we sure we shall be healthier will our passions become feebler and our love of the world less.
